CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC!

DR. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE.

WHEREAS it has become known to the Proprietors of Dr BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE that a worthless imitation, bearing a similar name, is exported to India, China, &c., and endeavoured to be foisted on purchasers as equal in efficacy to Dr Bright's Phosphodyne, they feel it due to the public to specially caution them against this compound and request their most careful attention to the following distinctive characteristics of Dr Bright's (the only genuine) Phosphodyne.

1st.—That Dr Bright's Phosphodyne is sold only in cases.

2nd.—The words "Dr Bright's Phosphodyne" are clearly blown in each bottle.

3rd.—The Registered Trade Mark and Signature of Patience are printed on the label of every case.

4th.—Directions for use in all the following languages are enclosed in each case:—English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese, Russian, Danish, Turkish, Persian, Hindostani, Madrasse, Bengalee, Chinese, and Japanese.

Without which none can POSSIBLY be Genuine.

DR. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE

Is sold by all Chemists and Patent Medicine Vendors throughout the Globe.

In India, China, &c., DR. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE is generally sold at an advance on the English Price.

CAUTION TO MEDICINE VENDORS.

The Trade Mark, Label, &c., of DR. BRIGHT'S PHOSPHODYNE are duly entered at Stationers' Hall, London, and are also registered in the Chief Cities of the World.

A WARNING TO OFFICERS OF SHIPS.

Cheong Asoo, a lad 16 years of age, engineer's boy on board the S.S. Brisbane, was charged on suspicion with having stolen a cash-box containing about $20 in money and ship's accounts, from the berth of Mr. John Scott, the steward of the Brisbane. He was further charged with stealing 3 tins of preserves, and a tin of mustard, the property of Captain Riddell, master of the S.S. Brisbane.

Defendant admitted having stolen the preserves.

It would appear from the evidence of Mr. Scott, the steward, that the defendant had been engineer's boy for about 13 months. Last evening, about 20 minutes past 8 o'clock, the complainant missed a cash box out of his room, containing money in gold, silver and notes to the value of $20, besides some ship's papers. The box was all right at 8 o'clock, and complainant looked his door, but the windows were open, and it was very easy for any one to enter by the windows. On returning to the cabin at 20 minutes past 8 he found his door all right, but the drawer was broken open and the cash box gone. Suspicion pointed to the defendant owing to his having been seen to leave the ship by Chinese passenger about the time the robbery must have been effected, and P. C. No. 59 (Laughlan Mackay) succeeded in tracing the defendant to a lighter belonging to Messrs Butterfield & Swire, and a box was found there containing two Chinese purses, and $34 in gold and silver. The boy said he had got the money by gambling. The complainant could only identify one 10-cent piece which was gold washed on the one side. He said it was possible for the boy to have won such money by gambling, as the passengers gambled.

The case was remanded until Friday at 2 p.m., to enable the police to make further enquiries.

SUPREME COURT.

IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.
(Before the FULL COURT.)

Oct. 30, 1878.

Lo Mut v. Hu Mut and another.—This was a petition before the full court made by the plaintiff to compel the defendant as plaintiff's agent to furnish a statement of account. The Attorney General (the Hon. G. Phillips), instructed by Mr. Drerston, appeared for the plaintiff, and Messrs Hayler and Ng Choy, instructed by Messrs Stephens and Holmes, for the defendants. The case had been postponed in order to allow the parties to come to some understanding together, but they had failed to do so.

From the opening remarks of the learned Attorney General it would appear, the parties to the suit had been interested in a shop in this Colony which was opened some time in 1856 or 1857 for the sale of prepared opium known as the Ping Ke opium shop, 25 Jervois Street. The plaintiff, who was the original owner of the shop, had taken one or two persons as partners from time to time. The 1st defendant had been manager of the shop and the second defendant was plaintiff's partner, but as he refused to become a party to the present action he was made a defendant. It appears that the plaintiff was at present residing at Canton and had appointed Mr. Ho Am, the manager of the On Tai Insurance Co., as his agent in this matter. The defendant however had refused to give the plaintiff any explanation of the accounts. The plea set up by the defence was that the action was barred by the statute of limitation, and again a plea of settled account. The second defendant had gone to California, but had been served with a notice of the proceedings about to be taken. The learned Attorney General said that his client was prepared to prove that there was some $30,000 error in the books, that the statute of limitation did not bar the action, and that no account had been furnished by the defendant, and he quoted from Daniel to prove the legality of the proceedings. There was no bar, he said, to a trust according to English law, an agent who receives money simply as such was always liable to account for same. The irregularities, to say the least of them, were only found out last year, and it could only be ascertained whether or not they were irregularities by the defendants explaining the accounts.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow.

SHANGHAI ROWING CLUB REGATTA.

FIRST DAY.

Friday, October 28th, 1878.

Fine weather is essential to the complete success of an out-door entertainment. The autumn regatta had been looked forward to with much interest, but the lowering clouds of this morning put an end to many pleasant hopes. Soon after noon the rain began to fall, and continued without intermission during the remainder of the day. The attendance of the public, and especially of the ladies, was much smaller than it otherwise would have been, but still considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings, which were followed by the performances of a band under the direction of Mr. Bernard.

Subjoined are the results of the several contests:

Men-of-war's Boats Race.—No entrance fee. First boat $10; Second $5. No second prize unless three start. Distance, 1 mile.

Two boats crews only entered for this race, both from the same vessel, the French boat of war Cougar. They were distinguished by a red and a blue flag; and the race was won by the red.

WRECK OF VESSELS SAILING FROM SHANGHAI.

(Hirogo News.)

The Kiushiu Maru, which arrived at Kobe from Kagoshima on Saturday, brought the Captain, his wife, officers and crew (all but three of the latter) of the American ship Lookout, wrecked last month on Kutsun-shima, about a hundred miles from Kagoshima. The News has been furnished by Captain Wiggins with the following account of the disaster:

American ship Lookout, of San Francisco, left Shanghai at 10 a.m. September 7th, in tow tugboat Polein, and at noon came to anchor in the Yangtze river.

At 1 p.m. and beat down the river. At 3 a.m. on the 8th came to anchor below the outer Lightship, in a calm, when the pilot left. Got underway at 9 a.m. and stood out towards the Saddle. Came to anchor at 3 p.m. in a calm (North Saddle Lightship bearing E. by S. distant 9 miles), where we lay till 9 a.m. on September 10th, when we got underway and stood out to sea. At noon were in Lat. 31° 36' N., Long. 124° 04' E., with moderate E.N.W. winds and fine weather. On the 11th the weather continued fine, with Northerly breezes. At 6 p.m. passed close to Kutsun-shima, and at midnight had run by log from the Island 81 miles S.E., when we were to under lower topsails in Lat. 30° 32' N., Long. 129° 55' E. At this time, the barometer beginning to fall rapidly, took in all sails, after having reefed fore and main courses and spinnaker. At 2 a.m. lying under bare poles, with gale increasing rapidly. By 3 a.m. the gale had increased to a typhoon. At 7 a.m. a perfect tornado, Main-topmast went by the board, taking head of lower-mast above the eyes of rigging, and at about the same time the fore-top-gallant mast was carried away. At 7.30 the mislaid-top mast went by the board, carrying away head of lower-mast. At 9.30 the ship struck twice or thrice on a reef and went over.

Sounded pumps and found that she was making no water. At 10 a.m. breakers were seen under our lee, and in three minutes more we were up upon a rocky beach, where the ship was driven ashore.

Expecting the ship would be driven up, we launched a boat, to try to get a line ashore, it was manned by three volunteers (viz., Hugh Thompson, a native of Scotland; Leana Hansen, a native of Norway; and William Klement, a native of Russia), but as soon as the boat left the ship's side it was swept astern by the current into the full force of the surf, where it immediately capsized and the three men were drowned. We then cut away the foremast, hoping to be able to reach the shore from that, but it was not enough. As the gale now began to abate and the tide was falling we concluded to remain on the wreck and wait for a better chance to get ashore; when a number of natives appeared on the beach, and with their assistance we got a line ashore, by means of which we all reached land in safety. The natives proved to be Japanese, and were very friendly. They had brought boiled rice with them, supposing that we might be suffering with hunger. We were particularly fortunate in having a man (our Steward) who could understand and talk the language. They took us to some fishing huts not far off, where we got on dry clothes, and then they conducted us over the hills to their village on the other side of the Island, and gave us one of their best butts, where we remained waiting for suitable weather to embark in open boats (there were none other) for Kagoshima, nearly 100 miles North. During our stay we had a three days gale, which we supposed was the equinoctial storm. This drove the ship higher up on the beach, but she still held together, so that we were enabled to get provisions and most of our personal effects out of her. We were on the Island sixteen days, and then embarked in two fishing boats for Kagoshima. After being 5½ days on the passage, and just before reaching our destination, we fell in with the M.B.S.S. Co.'s s.s. Kiushiu Maru, Captain Thompson. We were all taken on board and very hospitably entertained by Captain Thompson and his officers. The Captain generously offered us all a free passage to Kobe, but subsequently the Governor of Kagoshima assumed the responsibility of sending us at the expense of the Imperial Japanese Government. We left Kagoshima on the morning of October 7th, in the s.s. Kiushiu Maru, but returned to a safe anchorage in Kagoshima Gulf, on account of a strong head wind and sea swell. On the evening of the same day we went back to Kagoshima, where we lay until the morning of the 10th, when we again left for Kobe, where we arrived at noon on the 12th instant. On arrival made application to the American Consul-General Stahel, who kindly attended to all our requirements.

The News also reports the loss of the British schooner Barbara Taylor, Captain Taylor, the following particulars of which were given by a passenger, who arrived on board the Yagoya Maru. The Barbara Taylor left Shanghai on the 9th September for Yokohama, and got into the same typhoon at that which so injured the Tokio Maru. Having all her sails blown away, Captain Taylor was forced to beach her on what turned out to be the Southern part of Quelpart. The natives immediately looked up every one on board in jail, when it was found that communication could be established by means of the written language of a Chinaman the Captain had with him, and the head man of those parts (probably the principal official of the Island) having been informed of what had happened, sent for the Captain and Chinaman, who were taken about thirty miles on horseback with a guard. After crawling into the presence and having an interview with the great man, they were sent in a junk to Hira, whence they made their way to Nagasaki. As two Japanese junk were reported wrecked at the same time and their crews treated the same way, a Japanese gunboat had left, and when the Yagoya Maru was coming away H.B.M.'s Esperanza was making ready to start. We understand that Captain Taylor does not complain of any ill treatment, and thinks it not at all improbable that they were all looked up for their own safety, as the people he saw were not an agreeable looking lot and every man was armed.

LONDON GOSSIP.

(Pioneer.)

The other day Colonel O. Baker and Allix regularly knocked up with their work on Baker Pasha's staff, treated themselves to a day's holiday, and crossed over to Prinkipo, intending just to saunter and loiter away the hours in the lovely island. To their disgust, however, on arriving at the Hotel Jademo, they found a long table laid for sixty covers. It appeared that an excursion of Russian officers had been prepared for. So much for the quiet day which the Englishmen had promised themselves! They must, however, eat, and there was no other place to go to. And now the Russian party arrived jolly and jolly, and began taking their seats. As there was nothing, however, to show that it was a private party, or anything but a great table d'hôte, Allix and Baker sat down. Remembering that they were in regular Turkish uniform and wore the fez. At first indeed the Russians mistook them for thoroughbred Turks; but far from indulging in any insolence on that account they behaved with elaborate courtesy, making several pretty little speeches expressive of the pleasure they felt in meeting at last their gallant enemies, not in the field, but at the social board. The misapprehension, however, did not last long. It was evident, from looks which Colonel Baker and Allix interpreted, that the Russians had soon discovered how the land lay, and who, or at any rate of what nationality, their convives were. Not that they were the less polite. No possible exception could have been taken to their behaviour. But it happened at a certain point of the banquet that a Russian officer arrived, who had been unable to come over earlier with the rest. Room was made for him at the table nearly opposite the pseudo-Turks, on whom he no sooner set eyes than he broke out into a flowery speech, saying that Turkey and Russia were no longer enemies, but had one mutual interest—to join and turn upon their common foe, the hated English. The words were no sooner out of his mouth than down came half a dozen heels upon his unfortunate toe, and half a dozen elbows were poked into his ribs. He at once saw his mistake, and blushed at his awkward laugh, but was not abashed at his blunder that he actually told and changed his seat. The pause which followed this would have been embarrassing if it had lasted more than a second. But Colonel Allix got up, and with great presence of mind and in a most happy manner, met the difficulty full face, and extracted out of it a positive triumph. He said that it was quite true that the politics of the two countries were for the moment adverse, and perhaps the feeling between Russia and England was not much more cordial than used to be that between England and France. Yet France and England were now fast friends, and he hoped the time was not far distant when the same would be true of England and Russia. In the meantime they were all soldiers-alike, and were united by the noble profession of arms. His ardent speech was received with acclamations, and the enthusiasm was increased a hundred fold when on comparing notes, it was found, on the one hand, that these Russian officers had formed part of Gorko's army which had been kept at bay at Tashkessan, and on the other, that the two English officers present had been Baker Pasha's Lieutenants in that incomparable exploit. There is a variety of civility about these Russians, after all, which it takes a little more than mere social friction to rub off. Their good breeding, however, is an artificial lesson which on occasion they can show themselves to have learnt, but which they naturally discard when there seems no necessity for constraint. Of all the Russian officers in Constantinople no one is so popular with the English as Skobeleff. With them he combines always to perfection the manner of a generous and appreciative foe. But with the Turks he is quite otherwise, and appears to have imposed it on himself as a special duty to insult and irritate Fuad Pasha, the Turkish Field Marshal in command. The other day he accepted an invitation to lunch with Fuad, who accordingly prepared a magnificent reception for him. A brilliant company was assembled to meet him; artillery were detailed to give him a salute; and the banquet, à la Française, was on a sumptuous scale. But no Skobeleff appeared, nor for a long time any apology. At last a lame excuse was sent that he was unable to come, being detained by a photographer who was "taking" him in a group with other Russian officers. Fuad Pasha's mortification may be imagined, for Fuad, a Circassian, has all the vanity as well as the valour of his race. When, a few days later, Skobeleff sent him a return invitation, it was not so much declined as refused, and very curtly indeed. Another matter. Between the Russian and Turkish positions, on the left bank of the Bosphorus, the courtiers make a dip, and the middle of this dip is a narrow streamlet crossed at intervals by little stone bridges. This stream had for months past been tacitly recognised as the boundary between the two positions. The Russian sentries were posted along at about a hundred yards distance on one side of the stream, and the Turkish sentries at the same distance from it on the other. Quite lately, however, as if to aggravate Fuad, Skobeleff had posted Russian sentries actually on every one of the little bridges which span the stream. The instant this was reported to Fuad Pasha he stuck a Turkish soldier alongside every Russian sentry, and there they are, probably to this moment, the bronzed Turk and the Russian guardman, on a space hardly large enough to hold both, fraternising good humouredly under circumstances where an Englishman and a Russian would be very likely to come to blows. So great is Fuad Pasha's irritation against the Russians that Valentine Baker had all the difficulty in the world in dissuading him, on the occasion of the grand Russian review at San Stefano (August 15), from his first intention of meeting the Turkish army in battle array as if to confront and defy the Russians. The only argument by which Baker could ultimately prevail was that Tolden would in that case assuredly postpone the review, thus gaining credit with the foreign ambassadors (who were all invited) for his forbearance and conciliatory disposition, while Fuad himself would wear the appearance of a fire-brand.

On Sunday night I was at a small musical party in Great Ormond Street at the house of a rich solicitor, a great musical connoisseur and an useful friend to all foreign artists of merit. By the bye, I think I have mentioned this gentleman and his musical parties to you before. At any rate these are some of the best known and recherché things in their way in London. In the season you'll meet Campanini or Albini, and some one or other of the most brilliant operatic stars there, who sing as freely and generously as if their notes were not worth bank-notes, and a song from them valuable in a very different sense from the proverbial "old song." On Sunday night there was Mademoiselle Stella Faustina there, a plain dark girl, shy and awkward, but with sweet modest evening ways and the most exquisite drawing-room singer—bar none—I have ever heard in all my life. Quality of voice, execution, taste, all were consummate. It was a treat for the gods. This young lady brings a great reputation with her from abroad, and no wonder. The rapture she excited that night in Great Ormond Street—where there were many quite competent judges—partly of stupefaction. For my own part, learning that she was engaged to sing at the Promenade Concerts at Covent Garden, I fully determined to hear a lot of her, and went the very next night, Monday. I had a front seat in the dress circle, and could hardly have been in a more advantageous position for hearing. Well, the result was that I have seldom been present at a more distressing exhibition. The winner of the Derby breaking his heart in the effort to drag alone one of his hardy and Perkin's waggons would hardly be a more painful spectacle than this poor girl with her divine but bygone voice struggling in vain against the immensity of the space she was expected to fill. Poor thing, she evidently felt her own inadequacy so painfully, and her failure contrasted so cruelly with the respectful enthusiasm she had excited the night before. Mr. Sullivan (who conducted) was evidently trying to console and encourage her; but a pronounced concert audience is rather brutal, and made no secret of the fact that she was inadequate. It is clear that Stella Faustina, accomplished vocalist as she is, must submit to the concert-room or the smaller theatres. As for Fatti and the other great singers, in whom one has hitherto taken it as a matter of course that their every note should be distinctly heard in the most distant corner of huge Covent Garden, I shall never forget (after Stella Faustina's passio) what an immensity of lung-power must go to their easy-seeming performances.

The employment this year of the Marlini Henry rifle in shooting for the Queen's Prize at Wimbledon has revived the controversy with respect to the merits and defects of that arm. The rifle, it is alleged, jumps about in the most erratic manner, owing, it is stated, to the stock being too straight, and it is recommended that the pattern of stock for the Remington rifle used by the Dutch volunteers should be substituted for the one now in use. The rifle is also found fault with, and it is argued from reference to scores made with other rifles that if the weapon is to be employed for aimed long-range shooting, the present arrangement of sights must be altered. What is really a more serious defect has come to light with regard to the ammunition. The Boxer-Henry cartridge is not strong enough to stand the wear and tear of active service in the field, and it is asserted that cases have occurred in which, after knocking about for a few days in a soldier's pouch, it has got out of shape and unfit for use. The solid drawn case, on the other hand, which has lately been much talked about, is sufficiently strong to stand rough usage, while it possesses what under certain conceivable circumstances might prove to be the inestimable advantage, that after the cartridge has been once fired, the case can be reloaded with a tool which a soldier can carry in his pocket, any supply of powder and lead being utilized.

A very splendid sight in its way, is that of Hunt and Roskell's purchases from the sale of the Queen of Spain's (Isabella, not Christina) jewels. The most splendid and richest ornaments (for I did not think it exactly beautiful) in the famous Calatrava necklace, about which there was a superstitious belief that it was priceless, but for which I am told Hunt and Roskell gave the very enormous sum of £2,200, (fifty-five thousand five hundred francs). This necklace consists of twenty-four beads and three pendants. Twelve of the twenty-four beads are of gold studded with small diamonds. The other twelve are enormous emeralds almost, may quite, the size of Barcelona nuts. At first one has a difficulty in believing that they are really emeralds. You say—"Surely, they can only be coloured glass. No one would commit the sacrilege of drilling and stringing true emeralds of that size and beauty." And certainly it does seem almost criminal to have bored holes through gems of such nobility. But the wonder and indignation vanished before explanation. It appears that emeralds above a rather small size, say that of a pea, are almost invariably blemished with a flaw. Why this should be the case with emeralds alone among precious stones, no body knows, or at any rate I do not; but I believe it is so. Messrs Hunt and Roskell have no doubt that these magnificent emeralds in the Calatrava necklace had their otherwise incomparable splendour impaired in this way by flaws, and they were cunningly pierced through the said flaws with a distinct contemplation of the result that people would say—"See what a colour! And yet not a flaw in them! But what a cruel shame to have degraded and devalued them by boring."

Captain Burnaby (who is not timid) is going to contest Birmingham in the Conservative interest at the next election. In his address to the electors he had charged Mr. Gladstone with want of patriotism, subservience to Russia, indifference to human suffering, provided it were inflicted by Russians, and so forth; and these charges he supported by professed citations of Mr. Gladstone's own expressions. Mr. Gladstone thereupon requires chapter and verse, after his favourite fashion, counting with justifiable confidence on the ordinary looseness in which quotations are made, and the indolence which generally disables men from laying their hands on their authorities. But Mr. Gladstone, though a cruel and formidable adversary for Turks, had this time caught a Tartar. Burnaby promptly obliges him with a long string of references to his own pamphlets or speeches, dates, names, and "colours of the riders," all complete, bearing out almost in their entirety all his accusations. Mr. Gladstone at once perceives there is no advantage to be gained in contest with such an adversary, and so he tries the "other persuasion." His reply is complimentary and conciliating. He thanks (?) Captain Burnaby for his letter, in which he recognizes "the frank and manly spirit to be expected from a British officer." But Captain Burnaby is not going to be disarmed in this way. He rejoices with an irony that is simply exquisite:—"My dear Sir,—In your letter just received, and which, by the bye, is not dated (here is the first rap at the business-like Gladstone) "you state that you have never described Russia as the 'tormentor of civilization,' but have simply said, 'Russia carried the torch of civilization.' You will forgive me if I call to mind the old saying, to the effect that language was given man to disguise his thoughts. I prefer to speak my mind frankly and clearly. Indeed, it appears to me that you are rather exemplifying the old adage in yourself, when you seek to distinguish between Russia as the torch-bearer and Russia carrying the torch. But whilst admiring the frank and manly (Gladstone's own words—whether used in irony or simplicity the context shows clearly enough) "spirit of your letter, in which I recognize your well-known hatred of verbal quibbles I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully, Fred. Burnaby." And then Captain Burnaby dismisses him with a "Partisan d'art!" in the shape of a stinging postscript:—"P.S.—You do not say if you have read the Globe of July 30. Russia, according to the official account contained in that journal, has very recently been carrying her torch of civilization amidst the Jews and Mahomedans in the neighbourhood of Gumnuchas."

"Nor do you reply to the challenge conveyed to you in my work On Horseback through Asia Minor, with reference to the English officers and soldiers who were butchered in cold blood by your friends the Russians."

Gladstone must wish by this time he had left Burnaby alone. Of course the italics in the above extracts are mine.

Sir Charles Dilke pretends that Sir Wilfrid Lawson always speaks of the two British Plenipotentiaries at Berlin as Lords "B. and S."

THE ART OF KISSING.

We find the following worldly article in the Portland Sunday Times, a paper which is deemed the best authority in the state of Maine on the subject discussed:—"Never kiss a young girl if she doesn't want you to. The main ingredient that makes kissing endurable is a willingness on the part of the female. If it depends on anxiety to match the better. When a girl draws a man's hair and scratches his face drop her at once. She is destitute of good taste and natural affection, and the sooner you make love to her sister the better. As long as a girl doesn't claw and yell, and struggle like a panther, it is perfectly safe to continue prospecting. Get a little behind her, pass the right arm around her waist in front of her head, and if you don't know what to do next, go associate with the boys in the first ward. If you are beginning to teach a shy young girl who has, therefore, only been kissed by her brothers and father, touch your lips gently to her forehead. She will take this for an exhibition of profound respect. When that position has been gained, working the way down to her lip is as natural and easy as the course of a dog sliding down a wood flume. Never ask down to kiss. It looks awkward in case anybody is looking, and seems awkward, anyhow. Stand up, and the closer you press the girl, the higher estimate she will place on your good taste, common sense, and experience.

The San Francisco News Letter has the following:—"While Jefferson was playing Rip Van Winkle at Chicago last spring, he went to the theatre very much exhausted by a long day's fishing on the lake. When the curtain rose on the third act, it disclosed the white-haired 'Rip' still immersed in his 20 years' nap. Five, ten, twenty minutes passed, and still he did not wake. The audience began to get impatient and the prompter uneasy. The great actor doubtless knew what his was about; but this was carrying the 'realistic' sort of thing entirely too far. The fact was that all the time Jefferson was really sleeping the sleep of the just, or rather of the fisherman who has sat eight hours in the sun without getting a single bite. Finally the gallery got to be uproarious, and one of the 'gods' wanted to know if there was going to be 19 years more of this snore business. Here Jefferson began to snore. This decided the prompter, who opened a small trap beneath the stage, and began to prod 'Rip' from behind. The much-travelled comedian began to fumble in his pocket for an imaginary ticket, and muttered drowsily:—"Going clear through, 'duktor.' The audience were transfixed with amazement at this entirely new reading, when suddenly Jefferson sat up with a loud shriek, the exasperated prompter had 'joked' him with a pin. The play went on then—with a rush."
